BUTTERFLIES

The butterfly is an insect. Butterflies are noted for their wings, which are often colorful and bright.

Butterfly wings are a bit like bird wings. Bird wings are made of feathers, but butterfly wings are made of tiny overlapping scales (重疊的鱗片). The wings are colored in various patterns. Some butterfly wings look iridescent (changing rainbow colors, depending on the light) because of the way light hits the scales.

Butterflies have an interesting life cycle. They start as eggs. When they are born, they are what we call caterpillars (毛蟲). This is the larval stage for the caterpillar. The caterpillars then move into a cocoon, becoming what we call a chrysalis(蝶蛹). This is the pupal stage. When the insect comes out of the cocoon, we call it a butterfly. This is the adult stage for the butterfly. These clear stages of changing on the way to adulthood are called metamorphosis. Many animals go through metamorphosis, but the butterfly's changes are more dramatic(引人注目的) than most.

Butterflies can be found almost all over the world. There may be as many as twenty thousand different species(種類) of butterflies. Butterflies usually eat flower nectar(花蜜). Because of this, they are important to the life cycle of many flowers. Butterflies also need minerals(礦物質), which they usually get from water found in dirt and sand.

They reach their adult stage in the summer. Some butterflies migrate. The Monarch butterflies(黑脈金斑蝶) migrate about 3000 miles (4800 km) every year. They fly between Mexico and California.
